About the Conference:

This course is designed for physicians and surgeons to provide a state-of-the-art review of the latest developments in clinical practice. A series of lectures by experts in the field will describe the pathophysiology, evaluation and new innovative therapies for common medical problems.

Target Audience:

Cleveland Clinic Alumni and physicians interested in reaching out beyond their specialty to broaden or refresh their depth of knowledge.

Learning Objectives:

1. Identify the common types of bariatric operations as well as mechanisms for producing long-term weight loss.
2. Define the percutaneous options for aortic valve replacement.
3. Indicate the impact of technology on the physical diagnosis.
4. Recognize the physics and biologic tissue interactions of laser light. Distinguish the various types of laser modalities in clinical use.
5. Appreciate the implications of depression, anxiety, and personality on heart disease.
6. Achieve an understanding of the directions of public health policy and its implications for practice that will continue, irrespective of what happens to healthcare reform.
7. Describe the relationship between biological age and chronological age. Improve knowledge of human anatomy and physiology.
8. List modifiable risk factors for Alzheimer's disease that may serve to delay or prevent dementia.
